Praxis Multistate Standard Setting Study for ESOL Trip Report
December 10, 2015 – December 11, 2015
Allowyn Gem Boyd
ESL Teacher, L.P. Untalan Middle School

Purpose:

To determine a recommended cut score (passing score) for the ETS Praxis Test for English to Speakers of other Languages (ESOL)

Summary:

ETS instructed the panelists to sign a non-disclosure agreement of any confidential materials regarding the ESOL Praxis test items or the recommended test score to our state. ETS indicated each state will receive a full report regarding the multistate standard setting study process as well as the final recommended cut score. Each state will have the opportunity to decide on their cut score based on the recommendation.

The multistate setting study was divided into two panels. I was placed in the second panel of twenty-one expert panelists from various U.S. states and territories. We deliberated for two days at the Chauncey Convention Center in Princeton, New Jersey to “review” the Praxis test for ESOL.

Process:

First, the panelists were placed into small groups to determine performance indicators for each definition of the Just Qualified Candidate (JQC) which was created by the first panel. Next, each panelist took the test and self-scored. The purpose was to become familiar with the structure of the test, to read each item, and rate its difficulty level from a scale provided. Finally, the panelists collaborated and discussed each test question diligently. We were instructed to refer to the JQC definitions and performance indicators when deciding the level of difficulty. All twenty-one of the panelists’ scores were averaged which determined the recommended cut score.

Knowledge gained at Multistate Standard Setting Study:

- The panelists were from different states and territories of the United States. Every panelist shared their knowledge and experiences regarding ESOL which helped me gain in-depth knowledge about this specific field of study
- Panelists were open and respectful to each other’s views and different levels of experience

Future Opportunities:

- ETS encouraged panelists to sign up for future opportunities such as becoming a committee member, writer, and/or reviewer
